FOURTEEN SPEECHES.

That Was the Ex-President's Record for Yesterday.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 13. - General Harrison spoke to 5,000 people in Evans hall last evening. It was the concluding address in a series of fourteen beginning at Clayton and ranging down the state through Plainfield, Brazil, Green Castle, Sullivan, Terre Haute, Vincennes and Princeton. The smallest gathering was at Plainfield, the largest at Evansville, but the enthusiasm was as great at the former place as at the latter, and while Terre Hante turned out 10,000 people to great the ex-president, the 10,000 were not one bit more cordial in their precting than were the residents of the country hamlets along the line who turned out to cheer the train as it flew by, General Harrison was in excellent form. The whole country seemed to have turned out en masse, and as the expressioent was driven from the Vandalia depot to the opera house, his progress resembled an ovation. The building itself was crowded to suffocation, and while 3,500 people secured admission, twice that number were forced to remain outside, contenting themselves with echoing the applause that greeted General Harrison's strong points. He was introduced by the Hon. Richard W. Thompson, "the ancient mariner of the Wabash," who despite his four score years is still an active campuigner, and who aroused the audience to a high pitch of enthusiasm in presenting the orator of

But there was no lack of cordiality at any point along the line, and when the train reached this city, several thousand people were found braving the drizzle to greet the ex-president Opposite this city murching clubs from this city and adjoining towns were drawn up in line and the voices of 5,000 people rang out in a hearty welcome. At the hotel a reception was little after 8 o'clock when the axpresident proceeded to Evans hall, where be made the principal address of the evening. The hall is said to held lasting for an hour, and it was a sent 4,000, but there must have been 5,000 packed in like ra sins when the orator made his appearance, and standing directly under a large portrait of himself, was introduced by Hon. PENSION DEPARTMENT.

Commissioner Lochren Submits His Anmust Keport to Secretary Hoke Smith. WASHINGTON, Oct. 13 .- The report of for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, has been submitted to the secretary of the interior and the follow-publication: The report states that the number of pensioners on the rolls June 30, 1893, was 966,012; that during the year 30,035 new pensioners were added to the rolls, 37,951 were dropped for death and other causes and 2,398 previously dropped were restored to the rolls. The number of pensioners upon the rolls on June 30, 1894, was 269.594. The number of pension certificates issued during the year was 80,213 and 132,873 claims of all classes were rejected. On July 1, 1804, there were undisposed of and in different stages in preparation and advancement claims for pensions and for increase to the amount of 619,027, for which 287,200 claims, originals, widows and dependents are on behalf of persons not already on the rolls. These claims, save some recently filed, have been examined more than once and found lacking in essential evidence. They are the same cases that have come down through the past years. New claims of all kinds have fallen off from 363,799 in 1891, to 40,148, the fact being that original claims for pensions under existing laws are substantially akin, and the bulk of new claims are for increase, or for widows and dependents.

The amount paid for pensions during the year was $130,804 461, leaving a balance in the treasury of $25,205,- 713 of the appropriation.

Much dishonesty and fraud, mainly attributable to unserupulous claim agents, was uncovered and there were 194 convictions in the United States courts within the year for pension frauds, perjuries and forgeries.

Men calmly reckon that if the government report indicates over 400,000 000 bushels of wheat, the crop surprise is felt at the publications in the Citizen, a paper which took no stand in opposition to the Corbett-Mitchell fight when it was pending, as follows:

"Allow us to say right now that the so-called preliminaries of the so-called glove contest may as well be abandoned right now Jacusonville is not a candidate for any further notoriety in this line. The scientific contests, as the parlance of the ring has it, are nothing less than bratal prize fights in which one of the principals undertakes to panch the other's head off, according to certain fixed rules.

A GHOST STORY.

"Before the war," he began, "I lived fust about five miles from here. I had a friend living in the neighborhood. Parson A---, he was called, though he was never a member of any church-in fact, his presence at meeting was infrequent. His reverence, however, for religious subjects, or perhaps more marked was it for religious people, and his respect for their opinions, got for him the subriquet of 'parson.' My affection for him was very sincere, as is my regard for his memory. The one thing that I never could reconcile to his views was his absolute belief that there had been cases, and were even then when the dead came back upon earth and manifested their presence to those whom they loved. He was a devotee to Shake speare and had respect for the playwright's ghosts and witches. Well, the parson-I speak of him in this way reverently and respectfully-some years before the war moved away from here into the northwestern part of the state. He was fairly well to do, owned a number of 'blacks,' treated them like the Virginia gentleman he was and had their warm affection. He owned some fine horses and prided himself upon them, his nice wagons and his excellent gravel roads. My friend began to decline in health after he went away. I visited him often and attended to considerable business for him, and at the different times I was with him I noticed ament his failing health.

"He knew it was falling, and that repidly, and one evening he sald to me suddenly, without any reference to his condition, 'Joe, if I die before you, and I canmind you, if I can-I will come back from the shadowy bourne and reveal to you my presence on earth.' Ten days after that be was laid away in a little graveyard in the village near where be had lived. That was in the month of March, two years before the war.

"In the following September I had bustness in that part of the state and stopped at the house of my old friend to pass the night, having advised the family of my intention to do so. I arrived about 8 o'clock in the evening, and not for one second during my journey-and I was two days making it, going on horseback-could I get out of my mind my old friend's declaration that if he could be would after death make known to me his presence on earth. It did not exactly make me uncomfortable, but I remembered it, that was all. When I arrived, I was met by old Parker, one of the servants, who was glad to see me and took charge of my horse. He seemed uneasy and said he wanted to talk to me, so after I had greeted the fata-ily and taken supper I went out and found the old fellow waiting near the stable "The first thing he said was, "Mars Joe, does you believe in shadders?"

"What do you mean by shadows, Parkerl! said I: 'Ghos'es,' he plumped out, and the word gave me a cold thrill, for it brought back all the thoughts of what the purson had said and that had encompassed me on my journey.

"I ridiculed Parker, even though he had made me feel uncomfortable. I told him not to be a fool, and that he was old enough to know there never was a ghost. But Parker was not to be convinced. He had never seen one himself, but nearly evined that he had seen the spirit of the parson at midnight wandering among bin wagons about the barn. After my luter-"I don't know anything about the the date the new tariff law went into. Notwithstanding this the window. Before I could open the shutration I pushed open the window shutter. I expected to see my dead friend driving one of his wagons over, though I felt ha would not harm me. I needed no light, for the luster of the September harvest moon rivaled in its brightness the nounday son. I went out to the barn. There were the wagons standing on the gravel walk as I had seen them early in the evening, and the scene was one grand pleture of prace and quistness, an apotheosis of calminess I didn't know but what I was losing my senses, but I went back to rest, if I could, and, to my berror, again, just as I became quiet, came that sound of whoels cranching on the gravel. This was more than mortal could bear, and I got up and its the lamp. I sat it on the table and listened, but there was no poise then, and I became thoroughly frighten.d. I raised the lamp and looked around.

> On the wall back of my lounge hung one of those squirrel cages, with a tip house and cylinder outlet, and in that enge was a timed but very lively squitted, who came out every time the place was quiet and took gymnastic exercise, in the cylinder. You have probably all seen such a performance and can understand how der in the first degree, consured the like to the turning of wheels upon a gravel path it could be conjured into seeming.
